

Palace Theatre a roaring success

The Palace Theatre in the English Quarter may have only been open a month but it has already been heralded an unparalleled success by critics and patrons alike. Its proprietor, Mr. Grey, warranted the achievement to the wide variety of acts he employs along with very reasonable ticket prices!

Local heroes honoured by Queen

Syrtis Major's only resident consulting detective Sir Maxfield Colewell along with his two friends Sir Boris Brassey and Sir Tarquin Boufounder have all recently been knighted by his royal highness the Prince of Wales at a ceremony in Buckingham Palace for their services to the crown. Well done Sirs!

Moriarty gets life in Pentonville

The infamous Professor Moriarty has been sentenced by the Old Bailey to life imprisonment at Pentonville prison in Millbank, London. Many considered the sentence too lenient expecting a hanging for the magnitude of his crimes. Justice Reynolds who presided over the case was unavailable for comment.

Missing girl's mystery 8th Victim

Another young woman has been reported missing in the last month in Syrtis Major. Police are warning all women not to walk the streets after dark unless accompanied by a man and to report any suspicious activity immediately. One wonders if this is the work of the infamous Jack the Ripper despite the claims of Chief Inspector Lestrade of Scotland Yard to the contrary.

Body of young woman recovered from canal

The body of a young and as yet unidentified woman was hooked out of the canal leading through Syrtis Major yesterday evening by Police. One witness to the scene a Miss Doreen Spicer reported the body as being in a "right 'orrible state it was like it 'ad been gnawed on or sumfink!" The body was taken to Police pathologist Professor George Litefoot to be autopsied.
