MI-726 Imperial data file extract

MI-726 was a security droid belonging to a board member of the Sienar Fleet Systems company. During an attack on the board member's house, the security droid went rogue and vanished, eventually resurfacing to begin attacking Imperial targets. The Imperial Office of Criminal Investigations has posted a bounty of 15,000 credits on the droid for anyone who could destroy the criminal automaton.

MI-726 is an MI-series security droid produced by Holowan Mechanicals who assigned the droid to guard the home of a board member of the Sienar Fleet Systems starship production company during the reign of the Galactic Empire. While MI-726 was guarding its owner's home, a group of Alliance to Restore the Republic operatives raided the building, hoping to gain access to the schematics of TIE Series prototype starfighters produced for the Empire. As the house came under attack, MI-726 abandoned the board member and his property, going rogue and fleeing the scene. The security droid was not seen again for several years, after which it resurfaced and began attacking Imperial warehouses and factories as well as Imperial citizens. During one such attack, a security guard working at an Imperial factory encountered MI-726, who insulted the man's heritage and legitimacy before setting off an explosion that destroyed the facility but left the guard alive.

The guard reported his encounter with the droid and claimed it had droid accomplices, a statement that the Imperial Office of Criminal Investigations used in a bounty posting for the droid on the Imperial Enforcement DataCore. The bounty posting offers a 15,000-credit reward for any individual holding an Imperial Peace-Keeping Certificate who can destroy the droid. MI-726 is described as dangerous and suffering from "deeply troubling" glitches due to a lack of memory wipes.

As well as knowledge of the Empire, the droid also has a reasonable knowledge of the Rebel Alliance. MI-726 is bipedal in stature, silver in color, and possesses a pair of large lower arms ending in three-fingered fists and a pair of smaller upper arms that end in repeating blasters, which it uses in combat, although it can also use demolitions. The droid possesses red photoreceptors, which it can use with a degree of skill to search rooms and spot particular objects, as well as equipment that allows it to listen. MI-726 is also equipped with silver armor which enables it to move silently and a vocabulator, with which it is capable of speaking Basic.

Its last known location was in the Arkanis sector where it commandeered a freighter. The owner Kijiro Vance fled in an escape pod and is currently on Tatooine.
